

ONE CONFESSES TO POSSESSING BOOZE; THREE ASK TRIALS

Police Lead Quartet Into Court on Liquor Law Violations Counts.

Four victims of overnight police excursions put in their appearance before City Judge DuComb Tuesday, charged with unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor. One of the women confessed, paid a fine of $2.00 and came and received a suspended jail sentence. The other three, one a woman, elected to stand trial and their cases were set for hearing later in the week. Jacob Hosiowski, 338 S. Scott st., was arrested at his home after officers had found a two-gallon jug half filled with "moonshine." Pleading guilty in city court, he was assessed the minimum fine and secured suspension of 60-day jail sentence. Esther Szabo, 1123 1-2 W. Napier st., will stand trial Wednesday. A 10-gallon still and a small quantity of illicit liquor was found in her residence.

Visit "Neighbor."
Next door to the Szabo residence, the raiding squad visited the residence occupied by Steve Nemeth, 1133 Napier st., and secured a gallon of "mule" liquor. Afterward the "soft drink" dispensary of Sam Rodin, 210 S. Chapin st., was called upon and a half gallon of "mule" was uncovered for use as evidence. Nemeth and Rodin furnished appearance bonds for hearings Wednesday.

Sergeant of Detectives Val. Delinaki and Officers Kish, Winters and Pinter composed the raiding squad affecting the four arrests.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

THE WAY JEANNE HACHETTE WON THE GRATITUDE OF BEAUVAIS.

Jeanne Hachette's name is aptly descriptive of the greatest adventure of her life. Fame came to her in one day.

Jeanne was born in Beauvais, in Picardy, France. From early childhood she possessed a keen intellect and the ability to keep cool in an emergency. Jeanne was a favorite of all who knew her, and was noted for her acts of charity and her willingness to do kindly acts for others.

One day in 1470, when Jeanne was about 29 years of age, Beauvais was besieged by the Burgundians. Unprepared for war, the natives were thrown into a panic. The few men of fighting age who still remained in the town opposed the onslaught. Suddenly, the enemy appeared near the great wall which had been built around the city to protect the women and children.

There was a certain place in the wall which Jeanne knew the enemy could climb by ladder.

Regardless of her own life, Jeanne secured a battle-axe and determined to stop them from entering the wall. Alone and unprotected, except for the instrument which she held tightly in her hands, Jeanne stationed herself near the unsafe place in the wall and waited.

Soon her fears were realized. Over the wall came an enemy, who had climbed the ladder to secure entrance. Jeanne, raising the battle-axe, knocked him from the wall, and she did many more who came later. The Burgundians, unable to understand why so many of their men were falling back from the ladder, fled. They thought that the natives must have an army concealed behind the great wall.

Seeing that no more enemies were going to attempt to climb the wall, Jeanne snatched a flag which she had taken from the hands of the first man and made her way home. The flag was never placed in one of the churches of Beauvais. The battle was won by the people of Beauvais, and Jeanne was forever hailed as a heroine.

Louis XI, on hearing of the heroic deed of Jeanne, recompensed her with a large sum of money. She afterwards married Colin Pilon, and her descendants were exempted from taxation—a great blessing in that day when taxes were so great that they took nearly everything a person earned.

On the tenth of June each year there is a procession in Beauvais. In this parade the women march in front of the men in honor of Jeanne Hachette, who in the long ago saved the city.

VERSE O' CHEER

By Edgar L. Jones

A FATHER'S WISH.
Come and sit on my knee, my lad,
Tell me about the fun you've had.
Your dirty hands and your tattered clothes,
That smudge of mud on your cheek and nose
Are telltale signs that a little boy
Has tasted full of his cup of joy.

Come cuddle close on your daddy's lap,
And tell me of every sad mishap.
That the day has brought for I see
A streak
That a tear has traced on your grimy cheek;
Come tell me all of the things you've done
That have brought you pain and has brought you fun.

I wish that I could afford to stay
At home with you all the livelong day,
And romp and run as I know you do
Enjoying your frolicsome fun with you,
For then I better could understand
Your joys, than hearing them second hand.

CARTWRIGHT, "DAD" OF BASEBALL, NOW "RESTS" IN HAWAII

Organizer of First Game, Played in Hoboken in 1846, Buried in Honolulu.

BY ROBT. A. DONALDSON.
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—(By U. P.)—The spread of baseball as a national pastime is probably due to the California gold rush of 1849. This is the belief of a number of followers of the sport, who have recently been digging into the life and career of Alexander Jay Cartwright, the father of organized baseball.

Organized First Club.
Cartwright, who was born in New York city in 1820, drew up the first set of rules and organized the first baseball club, the New York Knickerbocker, which played the first game of organized baseball on June 19, 1845, at Elysian Fields, in Hoboken. The Knickerbockers had been organized a year when the first game was played against a temporary club styling themselves the "New York Club."

Cartwright spent the first 27 years of his life in New York, where he was first employed in a broker's office, and later in a bank. He was a member of a sporting club which played a form of baseball known as "rounders," or variously as one-old-cat, two-old-cat, and townball, on a spot near where Madison Square Garden now stands. The growth of the city drove them to Murray Heights, and later crowded them from there in 1845. It was then that Cartwright called a meeting of young men to consider hiring a playing field. A committee was formed, and instructed Cartwright to draw up a set of rules for the game. A few days later, under his direction, the Knickerbocker team was formed. Elysian Fields was selected as a playing field. On these grounds Cartwright drew a diamond on the dust, and explained the game he had formulated from the old game of rounders.

Taught Game Enroute.
Early in 1849 the gold rush to California started, and Cartwright heard the call. On March 1, 1849, he joined a party of adventurers who were crossing the plains. They proceeded to Pittsburgh, where during a stay while supplies were bought, he taught the game of baseball to the young men of the town. It was an immediate success. During stops at St. Louis and Independence, Mo., he also introduced the game.

At Boundary, just before starting on the long journey across plains and mountains, he wrote in his diary:

"April 28.—During the past week we have passed the time in finishing the wagon covers, stowing away property, varied by hunting, fishing, swimming and playing baseball. I have the ball and the book of rules that we used in forming the Knickerbocker club back home."

He carried the ball and book of rules with him all the way on the long journey. When he arrived at Fort Sumter, where Sacramento California now stands, on July 4, he wrote in his diary:

"All I have is the clothes I am wearing, my journal, the original baseball, the book of baseball rules, my rifle and ammunition."

He found time to introduce the game both at Fort Sumter and San Francisco.

Honolulu Plays.
During the trip he had suffered great privation, and was sick for a time. In San Francisco a physician advised him to go to the Sandwich Islands for his health. So, on Aug. 17, 1849, he sailed for Honolulu, where he arrived, still carrying his baseball and book of rules. He introduced the game in the Hawaiian Islands.

In 1853 he returned to San Francisco, where he met his wife and children, who had come around the Horn, and returned to Honolulu to settle permanently. He entered business for himself as a whaler's agent, and remained in the Islands until he died in 1892.

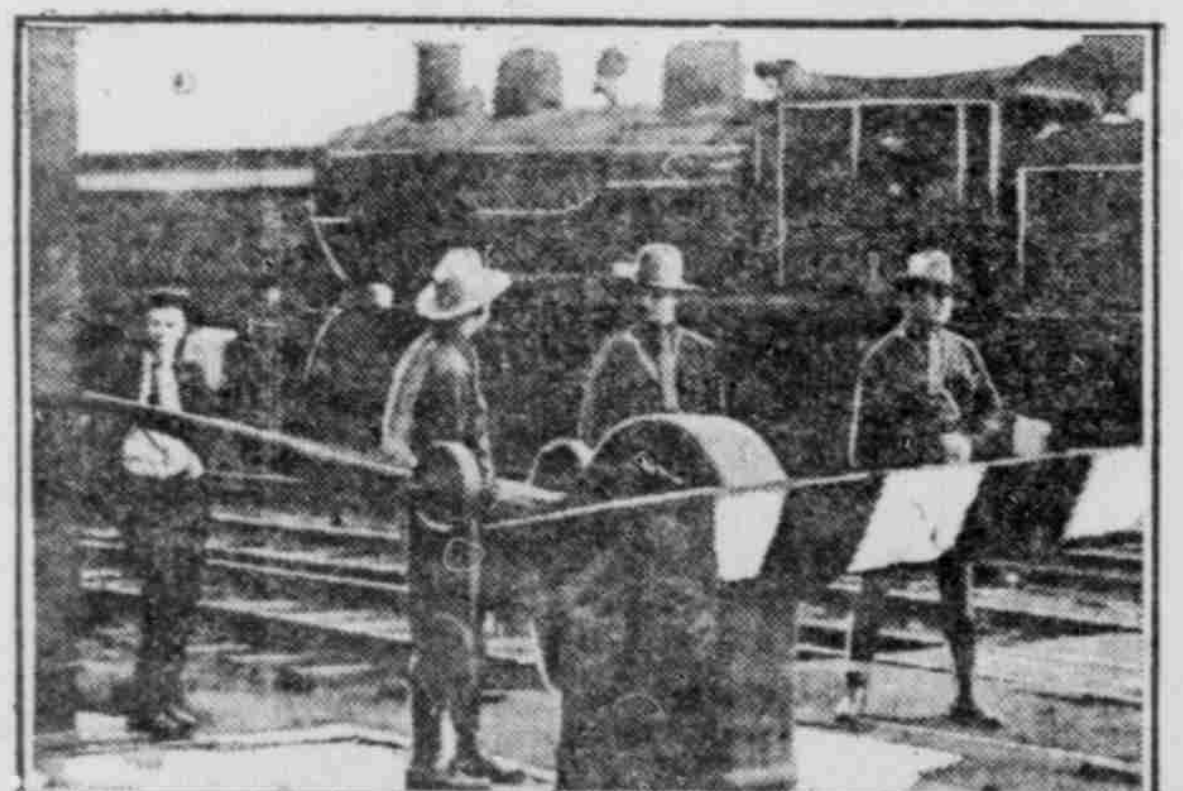

His grave is in the Nuuanu cemetery there. It is marked by a small monument. His grandson is still a resident of that city. Lovers of the national sport in the Islands are now considering some appropriate monument to the father of the national game to be erected at his final resting place.

Sport historians believe that Cartwright's trip across the continent, and his introduction of the game in cities from Atlantic to Pacific, and even mid-Pacific, has done much to give the game the national character it has today.

Fanning With Farrell

BY HARRY L. FARRELL,
(United Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(By U. P.)—In a field of sport where all new strategy was supposed to have been exhausted years ago, baseball this year has sprung a new one.

Since the time when there were more than nine men available on a team, the pinch-hitter has become an institution of smart baseball, but it remained for 1922 to develop the pinch-pitcher.

Lee Fohl, the wise manager of the St. Louis Browns, was the first one this season to resort to this new strategy.

At a critical moment in the re-Browns and the Yanks, Fohl's recent crucial series between the rickety sensational young "Shucks" Pruett after he had fanned Babe Ruth for the third time.

The fans couldn't understand the reason or the move when Van Gilders, a big right hander was sent in to pitch to Meusel.

"I wanted a right hand pitcher to pitch to a right hand batter. That's simple," Fohl said when asked to explain the strategy. It worked too.

Kid Gleason then came along with example No. 2 and it started the most interesting battle of managerial wits that has been seen on the Polo Grounds.

It was the last half of the ninth inning with the White Sox leading the Yanks 7 to 4.

Ruth walked to start the inning. Meusel and Schang went out making it two down. Ward and Scott singled filling the bases. "No Hit" Robertson was pitching. The weak hitting McNally was coming up when Huggins sent in Frank Baker to hit for him. Gleason dashed out and ordered Southpaw Fredy Schupp to relieve Robertson. Huggins jerked Baker back and sent in Fred Hoffman, a right hand batter, for Baker. Schupp got rattled and walked Hoffman forcing a run.

Murray, young pitcher, was due to bat, but Huggins jerked him and sent in Miller, a right hander to bat. Gleason called for a right hand pitcher and young Blankenship trudged from the bull pen. Huggins again countered by pulling back Miller and sending in Lefty O'Doul, a left hand batter. O'Doul smacked out a single and scored two runs tying the score.

The battle of wits might have been continued but both Gleason and Huggins were out of players and had to finish according to Hoyle, the White Sox finally winning in the eleventh by the crack of Amos Strunk, Gleason's last pinch hitter.

Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills will not be allowed to fight for the heavyweight championship in Jersey City, according to an open opinion expressed recently by one of the Jersey boxing commissioners. The commission is said to have nothing against the boys personally, but they would rather have the reformers wait on the commission of some other state.

George Washington Harper, the new outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, is the most impressive young gardner to come up this season. His early season work was handicapped by illness and he did not begin to hit his real stride until July.

"Hack" Miller, called that because he is built on the lines of one, and Arnold Stutz, both of the Cubs, have shown fine form. Miller is a terrific batter, but he is too immense to get around with great speed. He is said to be the biggest and strongest player in baseball. Stutz is fast, a fair batter, but he has shown a weakness on ground balls. Harper seems to be the best all-round player of the trio.

Because Commissioner Landis reinstated Walter Schmidt, the holdout catcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates, so promptly, he has been criticized in some circles. Since Schmidt had a legitimate claim on more money and since he remained idle during the controversy instead of jumping into outlay baseball, the commissioner could do nothing else and be just.

Many players were elated at the signing of Landis taking it to mean that they have a friend in him when he is called upon to arbitrate a question of salary.

Tommy McGinty, the genial Cleveland impresario and manager, has tipped all his friends to go to the family lot that this boy Danny Frush will knockout Johnny Dundee when they meet in Brooklyn on August 14, for the featherweight championship of the New York Boxing Commission.

Spanish Net Team to Play for Davis Cup

The Spanish tennis team has sailed for America to take part in the Davis cup matches to be held in Philadelphia, since England's default in the semi-final of the lower half of the draw put Spain into the final round. It is understood that the Spanish team will include Manuqui Alonso, Jose Alonso, Count De Gomar and Eduardo Flaquer. Manuel Alonso and De Gomar are active of the best players in Europe, as their performance in the world's hard court championship at Brussels testifies.

They have also had much experience on grass courts, because of their play in the English championships at Wimbledon and consequently should be at home on the turf courts of the Germantown cricket club.

As this is the first time the Spanish team has visited the United States their playing will be watched with keenest interest.

Many Local People to Hear

Madame Schumann-Heink.

A large number of South Bend people are planning to go to Culver Military academy to attend the recital which will be given Saturday evening by Madame Schumann-Heink, under the auspices of the American Legion post there. Milton Prudenstein of Adler Bros., who is in charge of the arrangements here, has announced that the Lee bus line will carry the South Bend delegation to Culver and return. Persons who wish may reserve a seat in the buses when making reservations for the recital.

The buses will leave South Bend at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon so that there will be time for those making the trip to have a picnic supper at Lake Maxinkuckee if they wish.

The Black Horse troop, which was in South Bend yesterday is being turned back to Culver to take part in the reception of Madame Schumann-Heink.

BIG LITTERS PAY.

A tour of four farms on which pork production records are being kept in Howard county was conducted on June 9 by County Agent Calvin Perdue, there being a total attendance of 73. The investigation of the records kept by these four farmers show an average of 4½ pigs raised per litter. One man succeeded in raising 7.4 pigs per litter, having a cost of $1.35 per pig. Another man raised but 2½ pigs per litter, each pig costing him $2.56. This tour thoroughly demonstrated what has been so often demonstrated, that it pays to use every effort to secure the largest possible number of pigs per litter raised to weaning age.

Benny Leonard Shows Up in New York With Fice Teeth Missing

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(By U. P.)—Benny Leonard, lightweight champion of the world, appeared at Madison Square Garden Tuesday with five teeth missing. A dentist had drawn them because of an infection which set in after his bout with Ever Hammer at Michigan City last Saturday. The champion conferred with Tex Rickard and Charley White concerning a bout with the latter, to be staged, according to present plans, in Veldrome the third week in September. He said, however, he would not sign definitely for the match until he found out how long it would take the dentist to get him in shape again.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

NOT IN THE MARKET

I always have been haunted
By dreams about a throne;
Since childhood I have wanted
To have one of my own.
To loil, reclining in it,
A scepter in my hand—
A monarch for a minute—
I fancied would be grand.

So when the Bolsheviks

Put on the auction block

A throne well worn and creaky,
Some ear had had in stock,
My heart with rapture fluttered,
I grinned from ear to ear,
And happily I muttered,
"At last my chance is here."

And then I recollected.

With quite a startling jar,
The history connected

With many a former czar,
To shoot the persons sitting
In gold-trimmed seats of state,

The Russians think a fitting

Expression of their hate.

No longer I consider

The purchase of the thing.

Were I the lucky bidder,

And sought to play the king,

I'd find it far from pleasant

In fragments to be blown

By some rough Russian peasant

Who coveted my throne!

VAINTLY, HOWEVER

The Irish republicans are still fighting to lift the curse of freedom.

A WAY OUT

It ought to be easy for England to pay the United States what she owes us in inflated coal.

NO CHANCE

What ought to be started in this country is a "Brighter Congress" movement.
